Moran and Gunboat Smith
Likely to Furnish the Next Big Bout for New York Fans.

Copyright, 1913, by The Press Publishing Co. (The New York World).

FRANK MORAN vs. Gunboat Smith is the next big thing in a fight line in store for New York's boxing fans. The match is not yet arranged, but it surely will be as soon as the managers of the rival white boys come to an agreement on the time, place and the money consideration. The Garden will probably be the place and the time the latter part of the month. There should be little dickering on the part of the managers. Frank realizes that the bout should be the best in the drawing card line in this city since the Gunner and Bomber will meet.

MORAN certainly established himself in white hope when he polished off big Al Palmer like a regular fighting machine Wednesday night, and Gunboat Smith couldn't possibly avoid a meeting with him now even if he wanted to. The Pittsburgher demonstrated that he has the all important punch worthy of comparison with Smith's deadly wallop. He also showed, at Palmer's expense, a certain brand of cleverness and cool headed judgment that many of the late years in heavyweight contests. If he isn't a good match for Smith, then no one in the present crop of white heavyweights is.

MORAN wasn't surprised by his victory over Palmer. It was only what he expected, he said, and isn't the least bit swelled up over the feat. "I always knew I could beat Palmer," he says, "and was glad of the opportunity to prove it to New Yorkers. Moran and his manager, Dan McKelrick, have planned a meeting with Europe the first week in October."

JACK JOHNSON certainly is in hard luck, what with injuring his spine in an auto accident in London and being grounded out of the exhibition in the English capital. To get an idea of the big negro's popularity in the theatrical world read the following from an English paper:

The Rev. F. B. Meyer, Hon. Secretary of the National Free Church Council, writes:

"The engagement of Jack Johnson seems to me a thoroughly backward step, and one which is likely to give a great setback to the cause of the variety music hall. I only hope that the managers of music hall frequenters will let the managers understand that they don't want an exhibition of this kind, and I congratulate the Variety Artists' Federation for the splendid stand they have made. I only wish there was time to focus public opinion on the matter on the variety music hall. But all who have the opportunity should use it to prevent the scandal of this exhibition. The music business is now in a very bad way, and it is something to say about it."

HARRY POLLAK, manager of Freddie Welsh, in a letter here addressed to everybody in New York City, writes:

"I have a bet on Welsh when he meets Willie Ritchie. 'Freddie is a sure thing,' writes Pollak, and then goes on to tell how the death of Luther McHenry knocked Welsh out of thousands of dollars. In contrast to the Canadian, Pollak has been traveling through the West for several months, and confesses he is yearning for a peek at the White Light Army."

JACK BRITTON is contemplating matrimony. His prospective bride is the pretty and slender girl who was married in men's clothes and tried to get into the Palmer-Moran fight Wednesday. Jack says she is a regular fight bug and used to take in all the fights on the Coast, where he first met her. In the West Sixty-eighth street police station, where she was taken, she professed to be terribly disappointed at missing the fight. She felt hurt, too, to think the vigilant detective had penetrated her disguise. She said she had a cigarette in her mouth, but all he could get for answer was a scornful look. "I don't see that they can do anything to me for wanting to see a fight," she said, between questions from the lieutenant on duty. "I go to all the big bouts in San Francisco, and I like them."

MARTIN KESSLER MATCHED TO RACE CHAPPEL SUNDAY.

A match that has been hanging fire for some time was consummated today when Arthur Chapple and Martin Kessler, considered two of the world's best motorcycle racers, were signed to meet on Sunday afternoon at the Brighton Beach Motor Club. Two hours out of three, each had to beat the other three times. Kessler has come to the front in rapid strides, and only last week, with Oline and Spier as partners, won the big twenty-four hour race. Chapple is now holder of the individual championship, but Kessler is confident that he can take it away from him.

Travers Plays Sensational

Morning Round.

GOLF SUMMARY.

(Morning Round, 18 Holes.)
Jerome D. Travers, Upper Montclair, 5 up on Fred Herreshoff, Garden City; Charles Evans, Chicago, 3 up on John Anderson, Massachusetts.

(Special to The Evening World.)
GARDEN CITY LINKS, Sept. 5.—Jerome D. Travers, three times champion, came all the way back to top form today when he defeated Fred Herreshoff of Garden City 5 up in the morning round of eighteen holes in the semi-finals for the nineteenth national amateur title. Travers' "come back" was almost magical and he made his old time rival look like a novice. The champion played a cautious game and his shots at times were sensational.

At the turn Travers was only 1 up, but coming back he peeled off hole after hole below par and Herreshoff was powerless to stop him. The champion had but three bad holes on the entire trip, the ninth, tenth and eleventh.

CHAMPION TRAVERS, STEADY, TOOK NO CHANCES.

Travers meant business at the start and refused to wear a cap. Both halved the first in 4 and Travers lost little time jumping to the lead in the next with a beautiful approach that gave him 3 to Fred's 4. The champion's playing was a revelation. He refused to take long chances and was as steady as a bunker. Herreshoff laid himself in the rough on his second shot at the third and needed four strokes to the champion's three.

The easy way in which the Montclair star rolled up his early lead surprised the big gallery. Travers made it 3 up on the long fourth. Herreshoff got two bad lies off his tee shot and used up six strokes before he dropped the ball. The champion, driving straight, escaped the traps and went out in 5. He wasn't so fortunate on the next, allowing a brazen shot that gave him 4 to his opponent's 3.

Each halved the sixth in par 5. On the long seventh Travers drove straight on a shot and went out in 5, due to two wonderful approaches. The Garden City player got in a rough once and finally landed in a pit behind the cup. Six strokes was his count for this place if trouble.

Both got bad lies in the eighth. Travers came well out of sand, out used 2 to take the hole. Herreshoff a good putt for a three. The champion got in a peek of trouble on the ninth, his first poor golf. His drive was short and his second shot dropped into a pit. Coming out, he overplayed the green and released three putts to make the cup. Herreshoff missed all traps and holed out in 4. At the turn Travers was one up.

The Jersey man still went wrong on the tenth. He got into all sorts of trouble and finally escaped with a six. Herreshoff took advantage of this slip-up and covered the distance in four because of a powerful mid-iron play to the green. Travers quickly rallied, however, and came across with a burst of speed that made Herreshoff and the gallery open their eyes in amazement.

reached the 15th. And every one was a sure gain that piled his lead up to five up. It was perfect golf, one good shot following each other in quick succession.

As a little extra treat to the gallery Travers threw in a thirty-five-foot putt on the thirteenth. Showing this wasn't a fluke, the champion sank a putt that rolled forty feet on the green.

It seemed an impossible shot, and Herreshoff was so surprised that he let a cigarette drop out of his mouth. Each halved the sixteenth in five and the seventeenth Travers won with a five. The last hole was a burlesque. A big lake intervenes between the tee and green, and Travers immediately sent two balls splashing into the water.

Herreshoff followed suit on his first shot. Finally Travers took 6 and Herreshoff 4 for the hole.

NIP AND TUCK EARLY IN EVANS MATCH.

Chick Evans, picked to oppose Travers in the finals to-morrow, had a hard battle with John Anderson, of Massachusetts. The sensational Westerner did well to lead his steady-going opponent 2 up at the finish of eighteen holes. Evans improved as he went along, coming back in 35, while he needed a 40 on the outward journey. Chick found the steady-going Anderson somewhat of a tartar, and he had his hands full to defeat the Bay State champ 2 up on the morning round. Evans kept his short better on the course to-day, but he had trouble putting, his chief weakness.

Theyoung Westerner jumped into the lead on the fourth hole, when he laid a drive on the edge of the green, and he holed out on a 4. Anderson, meanwhile, had a passage of torture; he got caught three times in traps and only escaped with a 6. The Massachusetts champion answered it on the fifth, when Evans became careless with the putter and needed a 5. Anderson took advantage of Evans's carelessness and passed him on the sixth with two beautiful approach plays. Evans squared the count on the eighth, and at the turn both were square.

Coming home, Evans caught his stride and didn't have a score worse than 5. His greatest play for the day was on the troublesome 15th, when he sent a beautiful drive over the lake and went out in 3. Anderson's steady playing was a big surprise to the gallery that deserted the Travers-Herreshoff match during the last few holes, and which preferred to see the hard battle between the East and West.

AGAINST TRAVERS

over early. The champion had little trouble winning. Anderson's playing took away Evans's nerve.

Anderson's display of courage and brilliancy carried Evans off his feet. The pride of the West is a wonderful player when leading, but he is prone to crack when pressed. Anderson pressed him like he had never been fought before. He showed no quarter. Anderson took the fourth hole going out and quickly annexed the next one. Evans was never the same after that.

Herreshoff played Travers to a standstill to the turn of the afternoon round. Travers was still 5 up, but he had all he could do to keep his lead safe. Herreshoff rallied and didn't allow the sensational New Jersey star to repeat his brilliant work of the morning round.

Toward the end of the outward journey Travers had a streak of bad luck and only his wonderful putting saved him on numerous occasions. Despite the threatening weather, the gallery increased to about 80, and the officials were forced to spread ropes to prevent the eager spectators from interfering with the players.

Travers became very busy at the start and ran his lead to 7 up on the fifth hole, but at that time Herreshoff pulled himself together and won the eighth and ninth holes.

Each halved the first hole with four and did the same on the second with par 3. Herreshoff on the third pulled his drive into the rough. He topped his second shot, which overran the green and needed six to hole out. The champion, keeping on the line, made an excellent approach within four feet of the cup and went out in 5. Both had 4 for the fourth.

Travers displayed grand golf on the next. He drove over 200 yards, brought his approach to within fifteen feet of the hole and followed this up with a wonderful putt for 3. Herreshoff twice got into traps and needed 2 for the hole. The Garden City player won the sixth on beautiful work on the edge of the green. Travers missed a chance for a hole, but he slipped up on an easy putt, one of his very few misses.

Both got into a great deal of trouble on the long seventh of 351 yards. Travers drove his tee shot into the second bunker. His second and third shots went into traps and only a good putt saved him from a worse fate than six. Herreshoff, to show that he could do the same, just about duplicated the champion's performance, and he, too, used up six for the hole.
